Some things never change. Democrats love their slaves.

A new Daily Mail report revealed Hillary Clinton and several Democratic candidates accepted thousands of dollars in donations from the Nxivm sex slave cult.

TV actress Allison Mack abruptly pleaded guilty in April to federal charges that she enlisted women into becoming sex slaves for a cult's leader, just as jury selection was getting underway.

It seems that Hillary Clinton may have unknowingly played a large role in the racketeering charges that Nxivm founder Keith Raniere is currently facing in court.

Court documents filed by the US Attorney's office prior to the trial detail how multiple members of the cult - including all five of the defendants who were indicted in the case - exceeded the legal limit for campaign donations when giving money to Clinton's first campaign for president.

That motion, which sought to have evidence admitted to the case to support the racketeering allegations against the defendants, said that the funds were donated in hope of gaining influence over Clinton.

'Witness testimony, corroborated by documentary evidence, will demonstrate that at least 14 members of the Nxivm community, including at least five defendants and co-conspirators, made the maximum campaign donation to a primary campaign with the understanding that they would be reimbursed by Bronfman or Nancy Salzman,' reads the filing.

'At the suggestion of a political operative, who has since pleaded guilty to an unrelated New York state bribery charge also involving campaign contributions, the contributions were "bundled" and presented to the candidate at a fundraising event attended by conspirators, including Nancy Salzman.'
