

Google Executives Pay Stanford University Sorority Girls For Sex

Female Students Have ‘Sugar Daddies’ Put Them Through College

Google’s married Forrest Hayes dies in sex orgy on sex yacht paid for by his Google cash. Google’s Eric Schmidt has a “Sex Penthouse”. Google’s Sergey Brin was in a 3-way sex scandal...and the list goes on...

It seems like some college girls these days want a college education but don’t want to pay for it. So in exchange for sexual favors, they are looking for a “sugar daddy” to foot the bill for their tuition and expenses.

According to the Associated Press, this is a growing trend. As college tuition and expenses are greatly on the rise, some girls are looking to use their bodies as a means to enrich their minds.

The paper tells the tale of Candice Kashani, who was faced with a huge education debt and soon began looking for a man to help her pay it off. She did not, however, want a real relationship. She just wanted to give sex away to someone with deep pockets. Apparently, it worked, too, as Kashani graduated this year with her entire school debt paid off by a string of “sugar daddies.”

Kashani defends the use of her sugar daddy’s wallet, and she bristles when people say she is involved in the sex trade.

“The people who have a stigma, or associate a negative connotation with it, don’t understand how it works,” she insists.

Now that she has graduated, the young woman intends to keep picking up sugar daddies until she finds a traditional job.

Kashani found her sugar daddies on SeekingArrangement.com, a website that hooks women up with men seeking companionship and are willing to pay for it. The site, though, insists the sexual exchange is not sanctioned and is “only” implied, not a prerequisite for membership for either the women or the sugar daddies.

The site’s creator claims he is only trying to help young women with tuition and that his site is just an “alternative to financial aid.” But others say it is nothing short of prostitution.

Some also fear these women are opening themselves up for violence. Kristen Houser of the National Sexual Violence Resource Center warns, “You need to pay attention that there is a power imbalance.”

Whether this is a good idea or not, it is beyond doubt that student loan debt is a major problem in this U.S. By some estimates, that debt is soaring by \$2,726 every second.

Student loan debt has jumped to more than $1.2 trillion and is rising, with the average student incurring a debt load topping \$37,000 after graduation. And that is just an average. Depending on the majors and course of study, one may realize upwards to $70,000, even more than $100,000 in tuition debt, before he is able to set his first foot in the job market.

This debt bomb will sooner or later explode, causing a major problem in the field of education.

Google investor Michael Goguen, who had worked for a firm that funded Google and Paypal, “sexually and physically” abused Amber Laurel Baptiste over more than 13 years after picking her up at a Texas strip club, her lawsuit alleges. Baptiste, who claims she was brought to the United States from Canada by human traffickers at 15, said she endured “countless hours of forced sodomy” from the tech titan. The former stripper said Goguen made her endure demeaning sexual acts, sodomized her for “six hours at a time,” and forced her to call him “king” and “emperor.”

Eric Schmidt, the head of Google, proclaimed that he would have a “open marriage” where he could have sex any time, with anybody, and is documented in a ream of news articles and video regarding his fifteen million dollar “sex penthouse” in New York.

Sergey Brin, another head of Google, is featured in numerous news articles for his “three way sex romp” with multiple Google employees forcing one employee to move to China to escape him.

A married Google senior executive named Hayes, who helped rig Google's searches for political clients, was murdered on his “sex yacht” by his prostitute, which other Google executives had used.

Ravi Kumar, another VC associated with Google Executives, was also murdered by a pack of hookers and pimps that frequented his Silicon Valley home.

Valley Girls was a private escort service that used Stanford Co-eds to service the sexual kinks of Google executives.

Ellen Pao famously sued Google founding investor John Doerr, and his company Kleiner Perkins, for sexual abuse.

One extremely wealthy Google executive is said to have 15 different girls from Stanford University who come to one of his condo's upon receipt of a text message with the word "rosered" in the message. This executive, along with many others at Google and Facebook often use the Rosewood Hotel on Sandhill Road in Palo Alto for sexual encounters. They sometimes acquire new girls on thursday nights at the Rosewood Hotel, which is unofficially known as "Hooker Night". That is a specially designated evening where almost every woman in the bar at the Rosewood is selling discrete sexual services to Silicon Valley executives.

Google employee divorce filings hold the Silicon Valley record for use of the word "abuse" as one of the reasons given in the legal papers filed to initiate the divorce.

The list of kinky, twisted, bizarre sexual antics of Google executives, and their investors, goes on for pages and pages...

Google seems to attract the most twisted, perverted, morally decrepit men in the world.

One has to wonder why, of all the large companies on Earth, only Google got to place the majority of it's people in the White House? That's right, Nike doesn't have it's people in the White House. Macy's doesn't either. Neither does Chevron, or John Deere tractor or any other company on Earth.

Only Google, exclusively and uniquely, had all of their people placed in the White House and top federal agency lead positions. What's up with that? Were they selected because of their technical skills or their ability to make people bend over?

An addiction to dirty sexual perversions are not the only illicit trends that Google folks display. The Google investors are members of a financing cartel called the National Venture Capital Association (NVCA). This group of frat boy elitists got busted for running the "Angelgate" scandal in which they were documented rigging, colluding, black-listing and contriving the whole Silicon Valley start-up industry.

Then they were caught again when Eric Schmidt, Mr. "Sex Penthouse" and the head of Google, wrote emails ordering a conspiracy against Silicon Valley engineers. This "No Poaching" conspiracy got the Silicon Valley VC's sued in a class-action lawsuit, which the VC's lost. The Google founder's best friend: Jacques Littlefield, kept the world's largest private fully functional military tank squadron, in fully operational status, hidden in vast warehouses in his Silicon Valley estate in Woodside, California. He said he had this arsenal: "just in case". Does Google make white frat house men insane or does it draw the crazy ones to it?

The FBI is finally crunching down on these people. After so many years of the White House ordering the FBI to leave the Google VC's and Silicon Valley perverts alone, it was just getting plain embarrassing for the FBI. The audacious impunity with which Google, and it's friends, engaged in tax evasion, importing hookers, bribery, stock market rigging, anti-trust schemes and other crimes has become so overt, in the media, that it was created a spotlight on federal law enforcements avoidance of prosecution of the shenanigans of the Google crowd.
