Steven Chu and the Big Screw!

1. All of the people that nominated Steven Chu were Silicon Valley VC relations.
2. All of the people Steven Chu gave money to at DOE were the same Silicon Valley VC relations.
3. All of the applicants cut out of the DOE money were competitors of the Silicon Valley VC relations.
4. All of the things Steven Chu said he didn't like, while at DOE, were things that competed with the Silicon Valley VC's.
5. Now Steven Chu is back in Silicon Valley working with the Silicon Valley VC relations and his investments are tied to theirs.

Interesting, huh?

By controlling the majority of the internet traffic and searches, Google was able to control the outcome of PERCEPTIONS of certain companies, candidates and policy issues by placing the more negative results of things their investors didn't like (See "Santorum") at the top of search results. This allowed for control of stock market results via fixed perceptions (See "Telsa") and the control of election results via targeted perceptions per region. In some areas, manipulating the stock market is considered illegal. It is absolutely false that Google search results are arbitrary. If that was true, Google Adwords and thousands of search manipulation services would not exist. These investors plowed tens of millions of dollars into Google in order to control public opinion. "Don't be evil", indeed.
