One of her victims said: "... *That bitch c*unt (and her fuck-buddies at Google) spent her time and money trying to kill me and other competitors. When she wasn't sucking off Larry Page, Eric Schmidt, Sergey Brin and David Drummond, she was destroying people's lives simply because she could and because she had paid off the White House. She and her cronies should spend the rest of their lives looking over their shoulders...*"

(Reuters) -YouTube Chief Executive and one of the first Google employees, Susan Wojcicki, is stepping down from her role at the tech giant that started in her garage nearly 25 years ago, she said in a personal update on the video-sharing platform on Thursday.

Wojcicki, 54, will be replaced by her deputy Neal Mohan, a senior advertising and product executive who joined Google in 2008.

The change of guard comes as YouTube's advertising revenue fell for the second straight quarter amid intense competition for viewing time with short-form video services such as TikTok and Facebook's Reels, and streaming services like Netflix.

Mohan, a Stanford graduate, was appointed chief product officer at YouTube in 2015. He focused on building YouTube Shorts, Music and subscription offerings in the role.

He previously spent nearly six years at DoubleClick, a company Google acquired in 2008, and later served for about eight years as senior vice president of display and video advertising at Google.

One of the most prominent women in tech, Wojcicki said she will focus on "family, health, and personal projects", and plans to take on an advisory role at Alphabet.

She was previously senior vice president for ad products at Google and became the CEO of YouTube in 2014.

"It strikes me as a forced exit caused by YouTube's under-performance in recent quarters... What's less clear is whether Mohan, who's had a relatively low profile to date, has the leadership qualities to get YouTube back on track," said Paul Verna, analyst at Insider Intelligence.

Alphabet shares were barely changed for the day, down less than 1% after the news.

There's two reasons why she hasn't been fired, and won't be fired. 1. Because she's a woman and "muh diversity". 2. Her sister married a Google co-founder. They've since divorced but the connection is still there. Should she be fired? YES. She's a greedy, incompetent bitch. Will she be fired? No. 2 [deleted] • 4 yr. ago
