

Office romance still flourishes because they are convenient sex for the lazy but deadly for your career

- Sex can be had in the office if you are lazy, impulsive, uninspired and unable to understand consequences

①

While relationships between colleagues have become decidedly more complicated lately, survey data featured in Forbes shows that the office romance is still alive and well. More than half of those surveyed said they'd had a relationship with a coworker, and a majority kept the relationship a secret. Troublingly though, only around 40% even knew their company's policy on workplace relationships. Do you have an office romance story?

Perspectives curated by LinkedIn Editors

 Adam Helterbran

Adam Helterbran

• 3rd

Educating/enabling the IT channel on physical/logical access control, IP cameras, video management software & storage

I find this interesting because my wife and I met at work...and I can think of at least 10 other married couples I know that did as well. "A survey by CareerBuilder found 41 percent of workers have dated a co-worker; the highest amount in a decade. Some of those relationships, 30 percent, lead to marriage. But the other 70 percent, well, that's where it gets complicated."

 CyberCoders

CyberCoders

215,494 followers

1d • Edited

Love in the workplace is common, but there's a slippery slope, especially in the "Me Too" Era. Read more about "love contracts" and other HR policies companies have adopted in response:

<http://bit.ly/2SU0RFW>

#valentinesday #love

#officeromance

 No alt text provided for this image

Office Romance | CyberCoders Insights

cybercoders.com

-  Alex Bredikhin, PE
-  Nadeem Amode

50 Comments

 Andrew Littlefield

Andrew Littlefield

• 2nd

Managing Editor at Convene

Love is in the air, but could that cause problems at the office?

Great story from Jared Shelly.

 No alt text provided for this image

Is The Office Romance Dead?

convene.com

-  Tijera Slack, MA, HRM

18 Comments

 Kim Elsesser

Kim Elsesser

• 3rd

Forbes Contributor, Author of Sex and the Office
For Valentine's Day...

 No alt text provided for this image

These 6 Surprising Office Romance Stats Should Be A Wake-Up Call To Organizations

forbes.com

-  Deborah Dowman

21 Comments

 Kaitlin McManus

Kaitlin McManus

• 3rd

Associate Law Editor at Vault.com

The results of Vault's annual Office Romance Survey are here! My brilliant colleague Stephan Maldonado and I worked super hard putting this together and (shameless brag) it got picked up by Forbes. Check it out!

 No alt text provided for this image

Attention Cubicle Cupids: The 2019 Office Romance Survey Results Are In!

vault.com

-  Stephan Maldonado
-  Sandy Massaro

3 Comments

Mihir S.

Mihir S. 2nd degree connection 2nd Experienced technologist, Visionary Entrepreneur and a Leader

No. Not yet. It's extremely unprofessional and awkward (in my opinion). Even if someone wants to do it I'll advise to keep it completely outside of office. I may be different but I go to office to put the best work of my life. To do something extra ordinary something which makes the world say WOW. And it requires focus and your full self. To me romance is nothing but a relationship. Relationships also are serious work. You have to nurture them like you grow a plant. I don't understand how ppl can do both at the same time. At least I can't.

→ In response to

 No alt text provided for this image
Natalie MacDonald on LinkedIn's post

-
-  David Leveille

144 Comments

Maya Hutchinson MHS, ACS, RDCS, RDMS, RVT

Maya Hutchinson MHS, ACS, RDCS, RDMS, RVT 3rd degree connection 3rd Clinical Manager Vascular Surgery at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis

Work relationship needs to be honest and consider coworkers, leaders also need to know and if it is not OK to do so then a couple or one of them needs to be prepared to leave. If no one is getting "hurt" then sure! My subordinates dated while they were married ... yes to others....there were measures taken but it took months of observation, Gossip, then getting facts that it was happening... if you thinking about dating a coworker weigh your options first. Personally - I'd rather not see anyone dating at work, especially early stages. We need work done and while on the clock it's about what your work looks like not your back side!

→ In response to

 No alt text provided for this image
Natalie MacDonald on LinkedIn's post

-
-  David Leveille

144 Comments
Tracey Wiseman

Tracey Wiseman 3rd degree connection 3rd Senior User Experience & Award Winning Designer \(UX + UI\)

I met my now husband at our first real jobs out of our degrees, we were friends and kept it private for ages. Been together almost 15 years!

→ In response to

 No alt text provided for this image
Natalie MacDonald on LinkedIn's post

-
-  David Leveille

144 Comments

Jacques LeDisco

Jacques LeDisco 2nd degree connection 2nd Publisher at Executive Mobilit

Is any office romance worth the potential career risk, and financial liability, should there be any harassment claims in the future?

→ In response to

Kim Elsesser's post

 No alt text provided for this image

For Valentine's Day....

-  Deborah Dowman

21 Comments

Jennifer Miller

Status is reachable

Jennifer Miller 2nd degree connection 2nd Division Director at Paladin Consulting

My soon to be husband and I met at work. We were both in positions of leadership but did not report to each other and kept our relationship out of the office. We are now getting married and would have never met had we both not worked at the same location. Work is a great place to meet people and build relationships/friendships that could blossom into something more. There cannot be a power differential but if two consenting adults want to get together, more power to them. It's a shame that companies feel the need to police your heart. I do support sexual harassment policies etc, there should be no inappropriate behavior or unwanted advances. Just make it clear if someone approaches you and your not interested- thanks but no thank you. If they persist then report it.

→ In response to

Adam Helterbran's post

 No alt text provided for this image

I find this interesting because my wife and I met at work...and I can think of at least 10 other married couples I know that did as well. "A survey by CareerBuilder found 41 percent of workers have dated a co-worker; the highest amount in a decade. Some of those relationships, 30 percent, lead to marriage. But the other 70 percent, well, that's where it gets complicated."

-  Alex Bredikhin, PE
-  Nadeem Amod

50 Comments

Melanie McFaddin

Melanie McFaddin 2nd degree connection 2nd President The McFaddin | Metis Group LLC and representative of Wiley Bros. - Aintree Capital LLC

We also have to understand the role our media has played in this. Shows like The Office have validated this and we know that the new entrants to the job have been significantly influenced by what they have grown up with as a perceived norm.

→ In response to

Adam Helterbran's post

 No alt text provided for this image

I find this interesting because my wife and I met at work...and I can think of at least 10 other married couples I know that did as well. "A survey by CareerBuilder found 41 percent of workers have dated a co-worker; the highest amount in a decade. Some of those relationships, 30 percent, lead to marriage. But the other 70 percent, well, that's where it gets complicated."

-  Alex Bredikhin, PE
-  Nadeem Amode

50 Comments