

New Asian Anti-Spy Gadgets Protect You From Electronic Eavesdropping With Screech Mask

Written by Curiosity Staff

3,603

It seems like every time there's a convenient new gadget released, a few months later you find out that it's been collecting your personal information or recording your conversations. In the future, that might not be so easy — not if University of Illinois researchers have anything to say about it. They've created a sound that's inaudible to humans, but can be picked up by any microphone, making it a powerful shield against spying electronics.